

Message From Muttalab: Unlocking the Secrets of the World's Most Mysterious Prisoner

On Christmas Day 2009, Umar Farouk Abdulmutallab, a 23-year-old Nigerian student, attempted to blow up a Northwest Airlines flight from Amsterdam to Detroit. The bomb failed to detonate, and Abdulmutallab was arrested and charged with terrorism. He was later convicted and sentenced to four life sentences plus 50 years in prison.

Abdulmutallab has been held in solitary confinement at a federal prison in Colorado since his conviction. During his time in prison, he has written a book, titled Message From Muttalab, in which he tells his story and explains his motivations for trying to commit terrorism.

In his book, Abdulmutallab claims that he was radicalized by American foreign policy in the Middle East. He argues that the United States has been waging a war against Muslims for decades, and that this war has created a sense of anger and resentment among young Muslims around the world.

Abdulmutallab also claims that he was inspired by the writings of Osama bin Laden. He says that bin Laden's ideology of global jihad resonated with him, and that he came to believe that it was his duty to fight against the United States.

Message From Muttalab is a fascinating and disturbing book. It provides a rare glimpse into the mind of a terrorist, and it sheds light on the factors that can lead to radicalization.

Who is Muttalab?

Umar Farouk Abdulmutallab was born in Nigeria in 1986. He is the son of a wealthy businessman and a devout Muslim. Abdulmutallab attended a private Islamic school in Nigeria, and then went on to study engineering at the University of London.

After graduating from university, Abdulmutallab moved to Yemen, where he studied Arabic and joined a militant group called Ansar al-Sharia. It was during his time in Yemen that Abdulmutallab was radicalized and began to plan his attack on the Northwest Airlines flight.
