The Srebrenica massacre was a genocide committed by Bosnian Serb forces under the command of Ratko Mladic on July 11, 1995. Over 8,000 Bosnian Muslim men and boys were killed in the massacre, which was the culmination of a campaign of ethnic cleansing by Bosnian Serb forces against Bosnian Muslims in eastern Bosnia.

The book begins with a brief history of the Bosnian War, which broke out in 1992 after the breakup of Yugoslavia. The war was fought between Bosnian Serbs, Bosnian Muslims, and Bosnian Croats, and it resulted in the deaths of over 100,000 people.

The book then focuses on the events leading up to the Srebrenica massacre. In 1993, the United Nations declared Srebrenica a "safe area" for Bosnian Muslims. However, in July 1995, Bosnian Serb forces overran the safe area and began to massacre the Bosnian Muslim population.

The book provides a detailed account of the massacre, including the eyewitness accounts of survivors and witnesses. The book also describes the aftermath of the massacre, including the trials of those responsible for the genocide.
